

- The nervous system sends signals from the brain to the muscles to initiate movement. This involves the motor cortex, which controls voluntary movements.