

Several processes must be completed to produce magnetic resonance images, including image acquisition and image formation