

Cell phones are the most common way to communicate today, offering both calling and texting features. Calling on a cell phone allows you to speak to someone instantly, regardless of distance, as if they were next to you. Texting is equally convenient, enabling messages to be sent in seconds, regardless of distance. Both calling and texting are essential features of cell phones, making them indispensable for communication.