

It also recommends the importance of conducting more tests and studies to isolate and identify other types of fungi that can be found in areas contaminated with petroleum residues to reduce oil pollution and speed up the process of biological treatment.