

the protagonist's hesitation to share certain aspects of their life with Carla reflects a natural desire to protect both themselves and the people they care about from emotional discomfort.