

Grog Mortenson's story began with failure. Five days later, he stumbled into the village of Korfi in northern Pakistan, wounded and hungry. Moving Greg saw that the villagers were very poor and there was a lot of disease and hunger. In 1993, he set out on Cimb K2, the second highest mountain in the world. 1 Mountaineering... But Greg never reached the top. The village school also did not have a roof, and the children used to write on the ground with sticks.
