

The actual path between two points taken by a light ray is the one which is the one traversed in the least time