

Domains of physical activity that are of interest include active transportation. Accurate measurements of behavior are essential to understand physical activity in the growing child, including estimating population prevalence, identifying correlates, detecting trends. Outdoor play and domestic activities or chores. In one, common measurement tools can be categorized into self-report and device assessed. Leisure time of out of school activities.