

Digestive enzymes are a group of vital proteins that play a crucial role in the process of digesting food in the human body and other organisms.