Three main causes of storms 1. Change in atmospheric pressure: When a large difference in atmospheric pressure occurs between two regions, this causes air movement and can lead to storms. 2. Temperature differences: Hot air rises and cold air falls, creating strong air currents that contribute to solid storms. 3. Humidity: Drought intensifies and leads to heavy rain or thunderstorms.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com