

It was just an ordinary night in a crowded subway car for Patrick Sowell, a 21-year-old website designer in New York City. They both raised their hands in an attempt to do so. They caught each other but it was too late. Patrick was shaken by the encounter and determined to find his counterpart, coming up with a unique idea. Disbelief, amusement and wonder were conveyed in that one look! He created a website called subwaymydouble.com. Patrick and Manuel decided to keep themselves out of the public eye, so they stopped updating the site. Suddenly he saw himself waiting on the podium. But the clothes weren't really his style. By the time he realized he had just met his counterpart, the doors had closed and they were moving.