

In a male dominated society, females have to fight for their rights. I strongly agree with this statement. In the developed countries, however, the women are equally competent as men, due to gender discrimination, they are not motivated and appreciated for their work. There should be a justifiable way to distribute these positions equally in both genders. The companies should be held responsible to allocate the fixed percentage of positions to females only, because if they are capable enough to work on lower positions, they can take over the responsibility of higher posts as well. In today's world of revolution, it is an utmost important to change the typical mindset.
