

Cover believed that modern art should be part of everyday life, not confined to museums.