

The idea that some variants alternate with each other without any reliable constraints on their occurrence in a particular context or by particular speakers.