By comparing the actual data collected during the experiment to the expected outcomes based on the hypothesis, we can determine whether the proposed relationship between population dynamics and the factors of immigration, emigration, birth, and death is supported by the experimental results.This will demonstrate whether the hypothesis accurately predicts how changes in these factors impact the dynamics of a population.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com