

The process is fairly simple. Pharmacists and nurses are trained to handle the rare allergic reactions if it occurs, according to Kathleen Jaeger. People may have to show their identification or verify eligibility before they get jabbed in the arm.