

In between each layer is room for circulation, allowing for fluid movement throughout each floor of the library.