

Some gaming companies have developed devices that help players control games by thinking, making the experience more interactive.