

Overall, her feelings while writing about sharks were likely influenced by her deep love for these animals and her desire to share their importance with the world.