

Every language has its flaws and limitations. For example, some language inventors have wanted to invent a simple and easy-to-learn language, some have wanted to create a gender-neutral language, and some have wanted to make the language more mathematical or scientific. There have been more than 500 attempts at creating such languages.