

Electronic systems in cars can control braking and acceleration, making journeys smoother and faster. All cars would brake together with minimal delay, potentially reducing accidents.