Electronic systems in cars can control braking and acceleration, making journeys smoother and faster.All cars would brake together with minimal delay, potentially reducing accidents.