

o Service providers use service description languages such as the Web Services Description Language (WSDL) to describe the tasks performed by their services and how to interact with the services.