

This Arabic-language textbook, designed for fourth graders in their first term, focuses on comparing life in Egypt and York. The curriculum integrates ICT skills, using digital resources to explore geographical differences between the two cities. Students learn about contrasting aspects of daily life, including housing, transportation, food, and cultural practices. The book utilizes interactive exercises and engaging visuals to facilitate understanding and comparison between these distinct cultural settings. It aims to enhance students' geographical knowledge and digital literacy through a comparative study of Egypt and York. The lessons are structured to encourage active participation and a deeper comprehension of cultural diversity.
