

According to the majority of men, the implementation of controlled burns, community education, infrastructure improvement, detection system enhancement, firefighting resource investment, and climate change mitigation. The majority of women also suggested punishing arsonists, improving buildings, warning communities in advance, fighting climate change, using controlled burns, and learning from Indigenous practices.