

To effectively address plastic pollution, a global effort is required, involving stricter regulations, innovation in biodegradable materials, and public participation in reducing plastic use.