

It is believed that people enjoy playing games only whenever they win all the games. I agree with this statement but to some certain extent which I would discuss further in this essay. On the one hand, only winning makes a game enjoyable. Firstly, winning a game gives an output of one's hard work. Since players keep on practising many hours a day for winning and when athletes win a game it feels them proud of working hard. Moreover, it's the feeling of pride which makes a game interesting. Secondly, winning brings fame. As winning a game makes a person popular among competitors and the audience due to their achievements in the game. However, this feeling gives a personal sense of joy also. So athletes should not lack interest in losing they should focus on working hard.