

Before applying marketing to human resource management, managers must first understand the principles involved in both areas of management. Human resources management objectives must be tailored to help managers achieve human resource and organizational objectives. Human resource management principles include selection, development, employee relations, compensation, and evaluation.