

This video emphasizes the importance of understanding the human element behind data, as exemplified by tech companies like Facebook and Google using user data for targeted ads. The example of a wellness app ad highlights the potential benefit of personalized advertising during a stressful period. However, excessive advertising, particularly on health-related websites, could hinder genuine engagement. Targeted ads for online mental health courses, while demonstrating the effectiveness of personalization, raise concerns regarding privacy.