

A study at Harvard University showed that most dropouts from American universities today are male (57 percent of university degrees go to women).