

Given the extensive misuse of water across the world, there currently is a loss of financial resources, natural resources, and plants that died as a result of not receiving enough attention and care for their types and species. The loss of some of the most endangered and valuable plants in the world causes enormous damage to farmers and landowners across the world.