

Amancio Ortega is the founder and chairman of a company that owns many stores, including the enormously popular international clothing store, Zara. Ortega had an ability to predict what styles were going to be popular and to create these styles with inexpensive materials. Now Spain's richest man, Ortega is the son of a railroad worker, and had no formal higher education.