

"Follow-up losses" were considered when the mother-child pair was not located in two consecutive follow-up periods, when they moved to other cities, or when mothers no longer had a regular bond/coexistence with their children, as in cases of donation for adoption.