The indiscriminate and unconscious use of antibiotics in the clinic, agriculture, and livestock have been increased the selection pressure in the worldwide microbiome, inducing resistant, multiresistant, and pan–resistant pathogen bacteria selection [1,2,3]. This resistance is reaching a critical point, as the increase in these resistant, multi–resistant, and pan–resistant pathogenic strains causes serious medical complications