

The study explores cost savings in PPI prescribing, a major part of healthcare expenditure. It aims to identify strategies like using cheaper PPI brands, reducing doses, and substituting with H2 antagonists. Cost-effectiveness is a critical consideration in healthcare decision-making, and this literature review evaluates studies on ulcer management. It emphasizes the importance of reducing PPI prescribing while maintaining patient care.