

In laymen terms, authority means nothing but power. Hence, it includes the powers to assign duties to the subordinates and make them accept and follow it. Without authority, a manager ceases to be a manager because he will be able to make his juniors or subordinates work towards the accomplishment of the goals. Responsibility means an obligation to do anything. Accountability means the responsibility to answer for the work.