

Culture and customs are part of human society, they shape our identities, and influence our behaviors. Culture is not static; it evolves over time, and is influenced by historical events, technological advances, and interactions with other cultures. Culture and customs are essential components of human society that shape our identities and influence our interactions. They provide a sense of belonging and continuity, connecting individuals to their heritage. They include the beliefs, practices, values and artifacts that characterize a particular group of people. It includes language, religion, cuisine, social customs, and the arts.