

There are several reasons that may push a student to work during university studies, the first of which is that a not small percentage of students do not have the luxury of choice, but rather need to work so that they can finance their studies, but many go to work before graduating with the aim of acquiring practical experience and skills, especially in fields of study that require obtaining Have practical experience to enter the labor market after graduation.