Whether or not a local business should offer e-commerce options depends on some factors.Companies may find that providing e-commerce options helps them reach a broader market and generate additional revenue.Additionally, some companies may not offer products that lend themselves well to online sales, such as perishable goods or services that require in-person interactions.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com