

The story revolves around a man in his fifties. He loved trains, was afraid of planes, and did not like buses. On September 14, he decided to go to Finland to spend the vacation with his friends there. He chose to go by night train, and his journey took nearly ten hours. Something terrible happened that night. A young woman with black hair and black eyes and her brother entered the carriage. They started arguing loudly, and he didn't like that. Suddenly the girl killed her brother because of a diamond necklace. Mr. Harris then ran away to inform the guard. Then they returned to the carriage. They found nothing at that moment. The guard remembered that it was an old story that happened on the train about eighty years ago, and this happened every year on the same date.
