

Egypt's rapidly growing population presents a significant challenge due to the limited availability of agricultural land. To address this issue, more land needs to be reclaimed through the development of water resources.