During my tenure as a volunteer with the student organization, I contributed to organizing the National Student Day festivities on campus.We encountered significant challenges in the initial phase, including divergent views on the event's direction, communication gaps, and difficulties in establishing a unified strategy as deadlines loomed.I helped consolidate disparate ideas into a cohesive strategy, delegated tasks based on individual strengths, and implemented a clear timeline with specific milestones.Our team, composed of students from diverse academic backgrounds, initially operated without a designated leader, embracing a collaborative approach to design the event program.The final program we presented emphasized the historical significance of student movements during the colonial period, particularly their revolutionary and emancipatory symbolism.
