

The luxury automotive market is particularly vulnerable to economic downturns and fluctuations in consumer spending habits. Any significant economic recession could reduce disposable incomes, causing consumers to delay purchasing high-ticket items like luxury cars.