

French police clashed with "yellow vest" protesters in Paris during their fourth weekend of demonstrations against President Emmanuel Macron's government. Officers fired rubber bullets and tear gas, while some protesters set vehicles on fire. Police also used water cannons to disperse the crowd. At least 30 people were wounded, including three police officers, and 551 were taken into custody. Several thousand "yellow vests" participated.