

The biggest challenge in youth development in Oman lies in changing the mindset of the young people themselves. Such activities develop new interests; create a new generation of open-minded youth who want to contribute to the future of the nation. Extracurricular activities that challenge their mental abilities outside classes play a key role. But even good grades at college are not enough.