

Non-IgE allergies may be difficult to diagnose because symptoms can suggest a food intolerance and there's no blood test for it.