

online questionnaire among working and non-working Egyptian females. Fifty-three percent of the participants reported experiencing TFSV; however, in terms of some types of DSV, there was a significant drop from before to during the COVID-19 lockdown.