

The main effects of power interruptions and poor power quality are the costs and safety with them. Therefore, electrical loads are categorized according to the effects of interrupting the power supply hence loads are classified as non-essential, essential, and critical. The effect of power interruptions on non-essential loads are minor while interruptions have a significant impact on the essential loads, especially if the interruption period is above a specific threshold value.