

regular disaster preparedness is not an option but a necessity. By investing in preventive measures, governments can save lives, reduce economic losses, and ensure swift recovery. Leaders and stakeholders must recognize that preparation is the foundation of resilience, enabling societies to face natural disasters with confidence and strength.