AI assists scientists and researchers by automating the fast analysis of large datasets to enable accurate species identification and the development of predictive models for environmental threats.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com